BOARD OF SURGERY

Overview

Dear Colleagues,

Welcome to the 4th annual Raab Multidisciplinary Cancer Symposium and the 2nd Annual Whichard Genitourinary Oncology Symposium. This year's program encompasses the two most common gender specific cancers in prostate (Whichard) and breast (Raab). Once again we have an impressive array of presenters for the morning, lunchtime and afternoon sessions who will provide both global and regional perspectives in each disease site. The day begins with Dr. Thomas Keane, chair of Urology at the Medical University of South Carolina in Charleston. Dr. Keane will be discussing new concepts in hormone therapy for prostate cancer. The Whichard symposium will conclude with ECU Health's Chief of Urology, J. Nathaniel Hamilton, who will provide an overview of surgical approaches to prostate cancer from radical prostatectomy to minimally invasive and robotic approaches. Our "bridge" speaker is Charis Eng, MD, PhD, an internationally renowned medical geneticist who will present virtually from the Cleveland Clinic. Her topic, PTEN Hemartoma Tumour Syndrome is a fascinating account of the beginnings of precision medicine in the context of a syndrome for which she is largely credited for providing our current understanding of it.

After lunch, the program will transition to breast cancer. The afternoon begins with Terry Sarantou, MD from the Levine Cancer Institute in Charlotte who will discuss the impact of histologic subtypes in breast cancer on surgical decision making. It is especially gratifying to have Dr. Rachel Raab provide the breast medical oncology perspective as the symposium is named for her parents, Drs. Mary and Spencer Raab. Dr. Raab will give an update on the medical management of breast cancer. We will finish the afternoon with Dr. Karinn Chambers, the new surgical lead for ECU Health's breast cancer program. Dr. Chambers will provide her insight on unique challenges in treating eastern North Carolinians with breast cancer and we look forward to introducing her to all of you.

Thank you for taking time out of you busy schedules to attend this year's symposium – I know you will not only find it informative, but also a refreshing re-introduction to in-person meetings and the collegiality that accompanies them. I look forward to meeting you in seeing you again and hearing your perspectives at this year's Raab Whichard Symposium.

Sincerely,

Emmanuel Zervos, MD, MBA
Course Director
